

Ezekiel Elliot

RB Ohio State Jr.

Height: 6'0" Weight: 225 Arms: 34"

Combine: 40 yd Dash: 4.47 3 Cone: DNP 20 Yd Shuttle: DNP Vert: 32.5"

Pros:

- Prototype NFL size, can withstand being a lead back
- Great size/speed combo
- Very good agility and elusiveness
- Very good acceleration
- Patient runner who waits for blocks to develop
- Comfortable running on the perimeter and up the middle
- Great balance, doesn't go down at first contact
- Very hard to hit cleanly
- Lined up all over the field for OSU

Cons:

- Can get blown off the ball by power guards/tackles
- Inconsistent pad level leads to inconsistent play
- Doesn't always maintain lane discipline

Ezeikel Elliot is one of the most complete backs to come out of the NFL draft in recent memory. He's big at 6'0" 225, but doesn't run like a big back. He keeps himself clean for the most part and avoids contact by running with a good pad level. He's incredibly elusive and can cut, accelerate, and change direction at an elite level. Elliot also runs with power when he needs to, but that isn't his calling card. Body-wise he's similar to David Johnson of Northern Illinois who started for Arizona last year. Elliot is an immediate day one starter who will have a major impact for whatever team drafts him. Despite his position, he's worth of a first round draft pick, and a high one at that.