Kendall Fuller has a lot of work to do if he wants to be a successful NFL corner. He's not a big player, and he doesn't bring a lot at the line of scrimmage, so he'll have to learn how to be a receiver's shadow. Right now he's undisciplined with his eyes and falls for fakes, leaving receivers wide open. He also doesn't turn his head around to track the ball when it's in the air. This leads to pass inference calls deep down the field. In the NFL, he'll be giving up huge yardage plays instead of 15 yards. While his hips look loose and he's got quick feet, he still has a hard time sticking with even bigger receivers in the short range.

Torn meniscus limited his workouts this offseason.
